while françois mauriac s reputation as a novelist is well established it is often forgotten that fiction forms only part of his output and that in the post war years especially it was principally his activities as a journalist which kept him in the public eye his interventions in the key debates of the period helped to consolidate his position as a major intellectual alongside jean paul sartre and albert camus this book examines the evolution of françois mauriac s career during the twentieth century and his gradual transformation from novelist to intellectual situating mauriac and his activities firmly in their socio cultural context it draws in particular on the insights provided by bourdieusian sociology to explore the mechanisms and social processes which allow mauriac to emerge as an authoritative voice of moral conscience in doing so it offers new perspective on key moments in his career from his changing fortunes as a novelist in the 1930s examined here for the first time through the prism of his reception by the influential nouvelle revue française to his unlikely collaboration with the then radical l express in the 1950s at the same time it argues that tracing mauriac s trajectory helps to crystallise the broader changes affecting the literary and cultural landscape in france during the twentieth century this study of mauriac a recent nobel prize winner is the first extensive critical assessment in english of a novelist whose reputation inside and outside of france appears to be both firmly established and highly debatable françois mauriac is a catholic novelist not merely a novelist who happens to be a catholic the world in which his characters live and the moral law by which they succeed or fail are determined by theology in a situation in which the judgement of the liberal critic may well be unsettled by the excessive desire to show himself aesthetically immune from theological irritations this essay written by a christian theologian who is also a literary critic must be of the greatest interest martin jarrett kerr after sketching the background and defining scope of mauriac s novels raises the problem of the apologetic novelists in the central section of his study with the help of numerous examples he examines the crucial question of the authenticity of mauriac s vision has mauriac succeeded in embodying his theological convictions in a truly living world or are there points at which religious views and artistic vision remain apart with the views intruding into the vision and upsetting its integrity and moreover may not flaws in artistic creation reveal flaws in the underlying theological system literary examinations of this order are likely to profit from the double equipment aesthetic and theological that is at the disposal of the present writer
