A Thrice-Told Tale

a thrice told tale is one ethnographer s imaginative and powerful response to the methodological issues raised by feminist and postmodernist critics of traditional ethnography the author a feminist anthropologist uses three texts developed out of her research in taiwan a piece of fiction anthropological fieldnotes and a social science article to explore some of these criticisms each text takes a different perspective is written in a different style and has different outcomes yet all three involve the same fascinating set of events a young mother began to behave in a decidedly aberrant perhaps suicidal manner and opinion in her village was sharply divided over the reason was she becoming a shaman possessed by a god was she deranged in need of physical restraint drugs and hospitalization or was she

being cynically manipulated by her never do well husband to elicit sympathy and money from her neighbors in the end the woman was taken away from the area to her mother's house for some villagers this settled the matter for others the debate over her behavior was probably never truly resolved the first text is a short story written shortly after the incident which occurred almost thirty years ago the second text is a copy of the fieldnotes collected about the events covered in the short story the third text is an article published in 1990 in american ethnologist that analyzes the incident from the author's current perspective following each text is a commentary in which the author discusses such topics as experimental ethnography polyvocality authorial presence and control reflexivity and some of the differences between fiction and ethnography the three texts are framed by two chapters in which the author discusses the general problems posed by feminist and postmodernist critics of ethnography and presents her personal exploration of these issues in an argument that is strongly self reflexive and theoretically rigorous she considers some feminist concerns over colonial research methods and takes issues with the insistence of some feminists that the topics of ethnographic research be set by those who are studied the book concludes with a plea for ethnographic responsibility based on a less academic and more practical perspective

The Iranian Metaphysicals

what do the occult sciences séances with the souls of the dead and appeals to saintly powers have to do with rationality since the late nineteenth century modernizing intellectuals religious leaders and statesmen in iran have attempted to curtail many such practices as superstitious instead encouraging the development of rational religious sensibilities and dispositions however far from diminishing the diverse methods through which iranians engage with the immaterial realm these rationalizing processes have multiplied the possibilities for metaphysical experimentation the iranian metaphysicals examines these experiments and their transformations over the past century drawing on years of ethnographic and archival research alireza doostdar shows that metaphysical experimentation lies at the center of some of the most influential intellectual and religious movements in modern iran these forms of exploration have not only produced a plurality of rational orientations toward metaphysical phenomena but have also fundamentally shaped what is understood as orthodox shi'i islam including the forms of islamic rationality at the heart of projects for building and sustaining an islamic republic delving into frequently neglected aspects of iranian spirituality politics and intellectual inquiry the iranian metaphysicals challenges widely held assumptions about islam rationality and the relationship between science and religion

Sacred Language, Ordinary People

2003-02-24

The cultures and politics of nations around the world may be understood or misunderstood in any number of ways. For the Arab world, language is the crucial link for a better understanding of both classical Arabic and the official language of all Arab states, although it is not spoken as a mother tongue by any group of Arabs. As the language of the Qur'an, it is also considered to be sacred. For more than a century and a half, writers and institutions have been engaged in struggles to modernize classical Arabic in order to render it into a language of contemporary life. What have been the achievements and failures of such attempts? Can classical Arabic be sacred and contemporary at one and the same time? This book attempts to answer such questions through an interpretation of the role that language plays in shaping the relations between culture, politics, and religion in Egypt.

Familiar and Foreign

2015-09-30

The current political climate of confrontation between Islamist regimes and Western governments has resulted in the proliferation of essentialist perceptions of Iran and Iranians in the West. Such perceptions do not reflect the complex evolution of Iranian identity that occurred in the years following the constitutional revolution of 1906-11 and the anti-imperialist Islamic revolution of 1979. Despite the Iranian government's determined pursuance of anti-Western policies and strict conformity to religious principles, the film and literature of iran reflect the clash between a nostalgic pride in persian tradition and an apparent infatuation with a more eurocentric modernity in familiar and foreign mannani and thompson set out to explore the tensions surrounding the ongoing formulation of iranian identity by bringing together essays on poetry novels memoir and films these include both canonical and less widely theorized texts as well as works of literature written in english by authors living in diaspora challenging neocolonialist stereotypes these critical excursions into iranian literature and film reveal the limitations of collective identity as it has been configured within and outside of iran through the examination of works by among others the iconic female poet forugh farrokhzad the expatriate author goli taraghi the controversial memoirist azar nafisi and the graphic novelist marjane satrapi author of persepolis this volume engages with the complex and contested discourses of religion patriarchy and politics that are the contemporary product of iran s long and revolutionary history

Following the 1979 revolution, the Iranian government set out to Islamize society. Muslim piety had to be visible in personal appearance and in action. Iranians were told to pray, fast, and attend mosques to be true Muslims. The revolution turned questions of what it means to be a true Muslim into a matter of public debate taken up widely outside the exclusive realm of male clerics and intellectuals. Say What Your Longing Heart Desires offers an elegant ethnography of these debates among a group of educated middle-class women whose voices are often muted in studies of Islam. Niloofar Haeri follows them in their daily lives as they engage with the classical poetry of Rumi, Hafiz, and Saadi, illuminating a long-standing mutual inspiration between prayer and poetry. She recounts how different forms of prayer may transform into dialogues with God, and in turn Haeri illuminates the ways in which believers draw on prayer and ritual acts as the emotional and intellectual material through which they think, deliberate, and debate.

Experts from across all industrial organizational IO psychology describe how increasingly rapid technological change has affected the field. In each chapter, authors describe how this has altered the meaning of IO research within a particular subdomain and what steps must be taken to avoid IO research from becoming obsolete. This handbook presents a forward-looking review of IO psychology's understanding of both workplace technology and how technology is used in IO research methods, using interdisciplinary perspectives to further this understanding and serving as a focal text from which this research will grow. It tackles three main questions facing the field: first, how has technology affected IO psychological theory and practice to date? Second, given the current trends in both research and practice, could IO psychological theories be rendered obsolete? Third, what are the highest priorities for both research and practice to ensure IO psychology remains appropriately engaged with technology moving forward?
